Vision and Purpose

- Adaptable social skills that are required to help each individual accommodate with new experiences. This is achieved through accurately planned activities (both curricular and extra-curricular).
- All individuals must be treated based in equality. Members of staff, students, and parents must all feel and understand that they are receiving fair treatment in order to ensure their comfort, which in return, will contribute to a positive learning environment.

- Update technology and resources are essential to maintain high quality education that ensures that any student at ZSIS is ready to succeed in other schools and in colleges.
- Every child and adult must seek knowledge. We can only achieve this by inducing the love of learning into our students'. With challenges and rewards, activities and encouragement, students reach a satisfactory level of enthusiasm.
- Quality assurance and conscientiousness go hand in hand as each individual works with loyalty, integrity, sincerity, consistency, and reliability.

History and Governance ZSIS is in its 36th year of operation catering education in English for students from Kindergarten through High School. Our curriculum is based on expected learner outcomes, built upon American frameworks and developed to prepare our students for further studies at colleges and universities in the region and abroad.

IT IS A MAJOR MILESTONE

WE GOT YOU

Welcome to ZSIS Kindergarten!

Your young child is going to kindergarten. You, Dear Mommy, are a xious, proud, worried, excited, and passing through an emotional rollercoaster. It is 100% normal. Your baby has grown into a relatively independent child who is going to spend time away from you. Will he be able to ask for something he wants? Will he make friends? Will he have to sit alone during recess? Will he miss me? Will he know his way through the building? Will he know how to unwrap his sandwich?

Your baby is a big kid now. He will learn to ask for help. He is super sweet and will make many friends. He has learned a lot from you that now he is ready to interact and communicate. He will surely miss you, but it is not going to be painful. He will be excited about many new things that he'll come back home with many stories to tell you! He will be surrounded with caring adults who will help him navigate through school.

FOCUS ON THE CHILD'S EMOTIONS

Your young child is also feeling apprehensive. He'll be leaving the nest for the first time in his life, or after a long summer vacation. You have already made your research about the school, and you have certainly chosen the one that best suits your perceptions and your child's needs.

- Explain the new daily routine to your child. Have him understand that he will be leaving you every morning to spend a great time at school with friends and teachers. Explain that he will enjoy many things and will have many exciting stories to tell you when he gets back home. Tell him that you will be waiting to hear stories as you prepare a yummy lunch for the 'big kid' he has become!
- Read stories about first days of school to your child. The Kissing Hand is one of our favorite stories. You can find many more stories that will help your child understand and prepare for the new experience ahead.
- Have your child help you pack his lunchbox. Fill it with his favorites. Teach him how to unwrap the sandwich and how to open his water bottle. Assure him that in all cases, the teacher is happy to help him.
- Take him on a tour around the school before the actual school day. He has the right to know where he is going to be spending his mornings.
- When you say good-bye, stay positive. Your child is watching your reaction to figure out how he should feel. If you appear worried or upset, he may be more fearful. Children tend to pick up our emotions. Say a quick, upbeat good-bye; tell him that yes, you will both miss each other, but he will have a great day. And remind him that you'll be back by lunchtime.
- Resist the rescue. Don't run back to the classroom if you hear your child crying. He may, quite understandably, feel sad and a little scared. But if you return to the classroom, you might prolong his distress. Have confidence that the teacher knows how to deal with these situations. After all, she has signed up for this!
- If you're worried, call us as many times as you want to check up on your child.

SHARE YOUR FEARS

Never hesitate to ask us questions and to share your emotions. Inform us of your child's reaction to school after the first week. It is our job to help you.

Preschool is all about fun, activity, growth, and development. Those first days will definitely become beautiful memories soon.

Pray for your child every morning, gear him up with a comforting hug, and send him to his second home - ZSIS Kindergarten.

OUR PHILOSOPHY AT ZSIS KINDERGARTEN

Children are at a continuous process of learning, and it is our job to help them know how to learn. At ZSIS Kindergarten, we engage young children in activities that challenge them to think, ask, express, and create in a safe environment.

SOCIAL-EMOTIONAL DEVELOPMENT

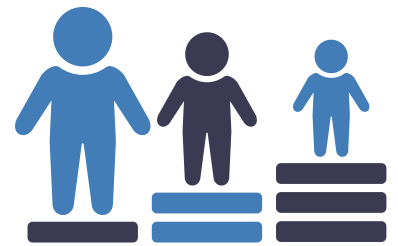

Our curricular and extra-curricular activities all aim at a positive and effective social-emotional development of children. We immensely believe that a happy, stable, confident, safe, and enthusiastic child is a learner who is guaranteed to succeed.

DIFFERENTIATION AND EQUITY

Differentiation is an approach that involves adjusting methods and strategies of teaching to meet the needs of individual students.

Differentiation in kindergarten is important because young children entering this stage of education have diverse learning needs, abilities, and interests. Recognizing and addressing these differences through differentiation can positively impact their educational experience and contribute to their overall development. With this applied, we ensure that every child receives an equal opportunity to learn.

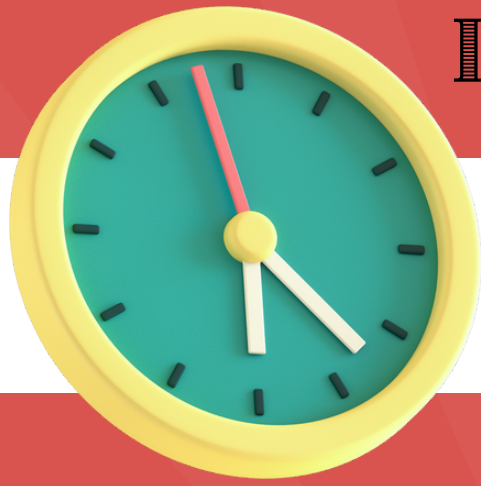

FUN IN LEARNING

It is no news that children learn best when having fun. A model kindergarten classroom is one that involves technology in teaching, clarity in presentation, encouragement by the teacher, diversity in activities, and fun during the process.

IT IS NOT ABOUT PAPERWORK

At ZSIS Kindergarten, books make up a small part of the actual practice of skills and knowledge. We provide children with different opportunities to practice what they learn everyday, and books are only part of these options.
